"WE SPEAK FOOD"

There is one thing we all know.... “Food” is at the heart of everything we do.

Food is families, friends & community.

Food is comfort, warmth, love & passion.

Food is about conversations with friends old & new.

Food is a part of our memories past & present.

Food unites us all.

Food is a language of the world that we all understand.

At ACIT our Food journey began more than 30 years ago...

Today we share our journey with you... Food is the language we speak, come speak with us.

Different cheese categories and Wine & Cheese pairings

Fromages Frais & Fromages Blancs

Fromage frais and fromage blanc are cheeses that are not ripened. The texture of these cheeses is creamy and melting whilst characteristically high in water content with dry content often ranging between 15 to 35%. These cheeses are white in colour with a smooth but slightly sour flavour due to the lactic fermentation.

Wine Suggestions: These cheeses match well with light grape varietals like Chenin Blanc as well as Pinot Noir and Tempranillo.

Soft cheeses with bloomy rind

These cheeses are put through a controlled ripening process. Their rind is white with a downy texture and the inside is soft and creamy, verging on melting. These cheeses release a delicate aroma of mushroom. A few examples: Camembert, Brie, Brillat Savarin, Chaource, Delice d'Argental, Saint-Felicien ...

Wine Suggestions: Camembert or Brie work well with Champagnes, Gewurztraminer and Chardonnay.

Soft cheeses with washed rind

These soft cheeses are characterised by a moist orangey coloured rind. Inside, the cheese is almost ivory in colour. In contrast to their strong odour, their flavour is generally less pronounced. It is during the course of the ripening that they are washed or brushed with a wine or liquor from the region giving them their unique taste. A few examples: Munster, Maroilles, Epoisses, Langres, Mont d'Or, Pont l'Eveque ...

Wine Suggestions: Tastes great with full flavoured Gewurztraminer, Woody Chardonnay, Aged Riesling and Pinot Noir.

Uncooked pressed cheeses

This is a cheese whose curd has been pressed at the time of moulding for maximum drainage. A pressed cheese is considered uncooked when the curd has not been subjected to any kind of heating process. Their taste and flavour come from the rind. Examples: Edam and Gouda.

Wine Suggestions: Choose spicy red wines like Sangiovese or a peppery Pinot Noir to match into these lightly fruity cheeses.

Blue veined cheeses

The curd of these cheeses has not been heated. It is when the curd is moulded that spores are added to the cheese such as Penicillium glaucum or Penicillium roqueforti depending on the cheeses. They are then pierced with long needles. These holes promote mould development and enable the veins to spread evenly throughout the inside of the cheese. Their texture is normally crumbly and the taste pronounced. A few examples: Roquefort, Fourme d'Ambert, Bleu d'Auvergne

Wine Suggestions: Matched well with sweeter, mellow red wines like Merlot, or dessert style wines like Tokay or Sherry.

Cooked pressed cheeses

Also known as "hard cheeses", after being pressed, the curd belonging to these cheeses is heated. Their rind is firm and thick. Renowned for their finesse and their fruity flavour, these cheeses come with soft, melting or firm textures. They also preserve the richness of the milk produced in summer from the mountain pastures after the snows have thawed. A few examples: Comté, Emmental, Beaufort, Abondance ..

Wine Suggestions: Match these cheeses to a fat woody Chardonnay, aged Riesling or Pinot Gris.

Goat's cheeses

These are the oldest of cheeses. Produced in a multitude of shapes, sizes and textures. These cheeses can be flavoured with herbs, marinated in oil, white moulded or ashed to preserve the integrity of the cheese. A few examples: Crottin de Chavignol, Selles-sur-Cher, Sainte-Maure...

Wine Suggestions: Pairs well with a classic aged Sauvignon, or a heavy wooded Chardonnay and Pinot Noir.

Cutting Cheese Portions

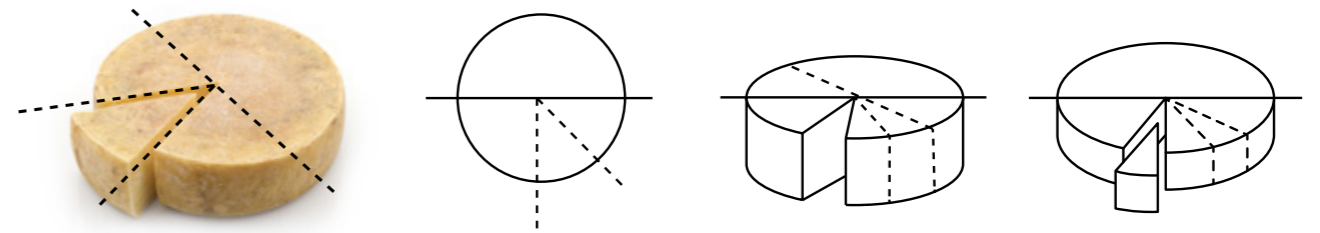

Each cheese is cut according to a precise pattern. Cheese does not offer a uniform taste throughout, so always cut it so both the core and the rind are included in the slice. All cheese portions must contain a part of the heel so that no one feels left out, also because the cheese's taste is not uniform and will be (especially with white mould cheeses) generally more pronounced closer to the surface. These subtleties are all part of the pleasure of tasting and appreciating cheese in its entirety, so take care when portioning so all of the nuances can be appreciated.

To cut a whole cheese. Point the tip of knife in the centre and slice outwards. For a piece of cheese that is already in a wedge-like shape, cut the tip crosswise and then the base lengthwise. The cheese is cut using a knife that's been run under warm water then wiped.

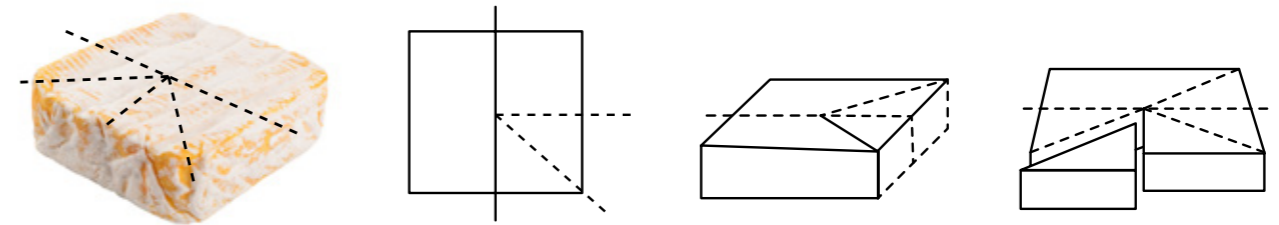

ROUND CHEESE BLOCKS

Cut into wedge-like portions by starting from centre outwards

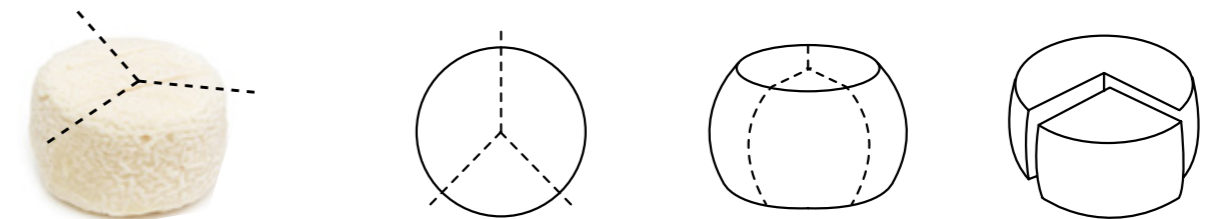

SQUARE CHEESE BLOCKS

Cut into wedge-like portions by starting from centre outwards.

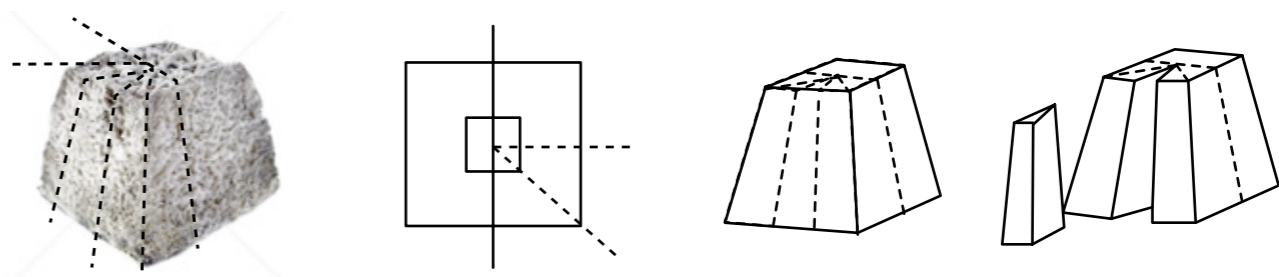

SMALL ROUNDS

PYRAMID BLOCK

Slice the cheese into wedges from the top center.

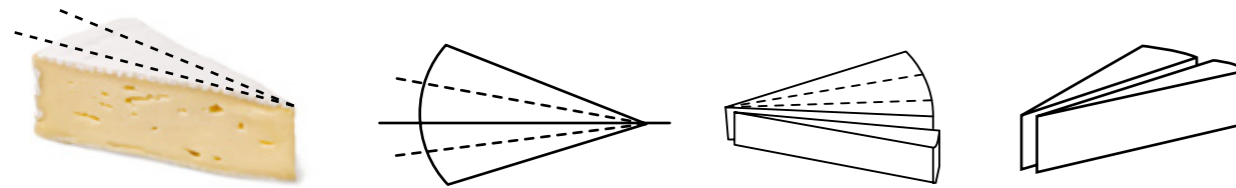

HARD WEDGE

First of all cut the wheel in two (half). Then again in two (quarter). Then cut each wedge into portions crosswise.

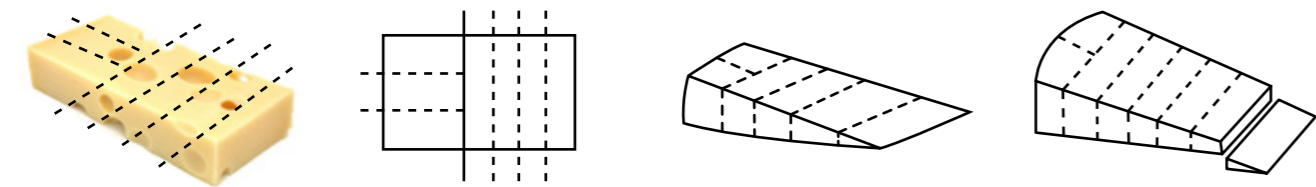

SOFT WEDGE

Cut from the tip of the cheese or in strips from the first cut then in wedges-like portions from the centre

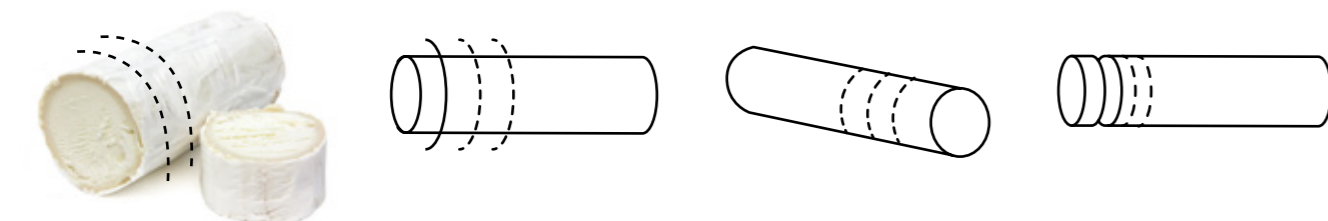

HARD RINDED RECTANGULAR

Cut from the tip of the cheese or in strips from the first cut then in wedges-like portions from the centre

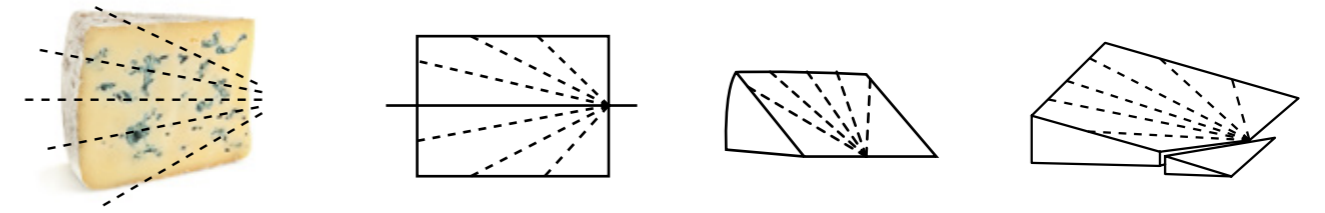

CYLINDRICAL TYPE CHEESE (LOG)

Cut in even cross-section slices.

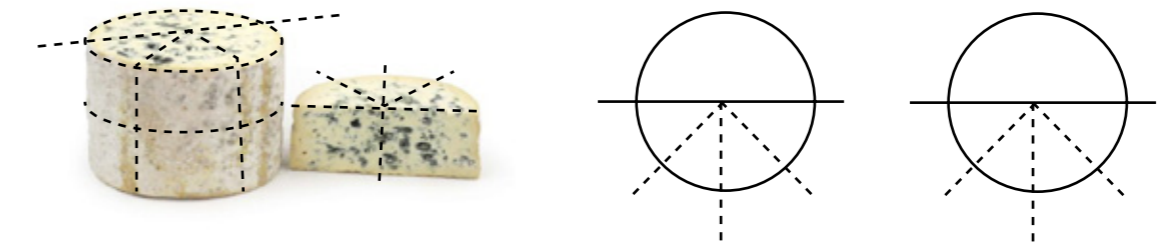

BLUE VEIN WEDGE

Slice it into points from the bottom center of the thin edge.

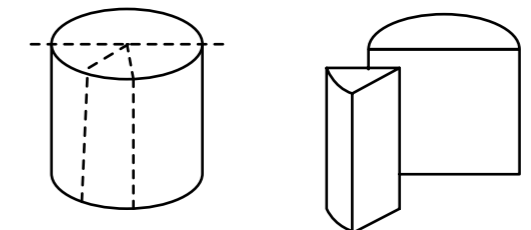

CYLINDRICAL CHEESE

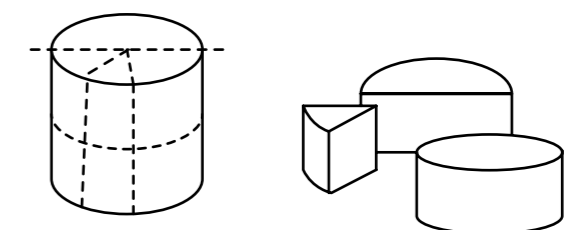

The cheese can be cut using a wire through the middle, then cut to wedge either traditionally, or Aveyronnaise style.
